Is your interest growing in our weekly budget or questions?

Many say that it is and that the next instalment is looked for with keen interest, and especially the answers. Why not keep yourself brushed up with all these facts concerning Canada, for the more you know about the Dominion, the better educated you will be and the more useful and valuable as a citizen.

We are glad to know that school teachers are, in many cases, using the material in try-outs with their pupils. That, too, is good business.

THIS WEEK'S QUESTIONS

No. 1—Who is Ralph Connor? What has he done to make his pen name so widely known?

No. 2—What do you know about the Peace River country? Where is it? How large is it? Of what importance is it?

No. 3—How is Canada dealing with soldier's pensions? How do they compare with what other countries are giving?

No. 4—Canada has 100 miles of canals. Have you any idea of the annual traffic that passes through them? What was the traffic for 1919? and how did it compare with other years—more or less—for this trade via the canals is one of our national barometers.

No. 5—Canada has a vast coal deposit that has been on fire for at least 150 years. Where is it?

No. 6—What is the extent of Canada's trade with the British Empire?

No. 7—What can you tell about the battle of Chateaugay?

No. 8—Canada has developed a large whaling industry. How many whales do you think were caught in 1920?

No. 9—Who were "The Hundred Associates"?

No. 10—How much does Great Britain owe Canada on war account?

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S QUESTIONS

No. 1—Sanna Moodie was one of the famous Strickland sisters of England, one of whom, Agnes, wrote "The Queens of England." Mrs. Moodie came to Canada in 1832 and afterwards wrote her experiences as a settler in "Roughing It in the Bush," or "Forest Life in Canada." She was also the author of a volume of poems. Her picture of early Upper Canadian life in the backwoods is one of the best yet written.

No. 2—Canada's growth of tobacco is rapidly increasing to 30,000,000 lbs. in 1919; annual consumption of tobacco, 35,000,000 lbs.; excise revenue on tobacco and cigars, 1918-19, $21,516,250—highest on record.

No. 3—Canada's field crops value for 1920 reached the highest figure on record, viz. $1,455,244,050. This big total includes $427,357,300 for wheat; $289,115,400 for oats, and $52,821,400 for barley.

No. 4—The famous Reversible Fall is found at St. John, N. B., where the tide of the Bay of Fundy and the current of the St. John river meet under the two bridges that span the river near the city. At one time, the flow of water is outward, at other times, inward; thus it is called a reversible fall.

No. 5—Canada has 8,000 lawyers.

No. 6—Canada was given treaty-making powers in 1884 by Sir Charles Tupper.

No. 7—Among the famous early explorers of Western Canada are Verendrye; Alexander Mackenzie, who discovered the Mackenzie River and crossed the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific coast in 1793; Vancouver, who visited the British Columbia mainland; and Simon Fraser, who navigated the Fraser and Columbia Rivers in 1806-8.

No. 8—"The Golden Dog" or "Le Chien d'Or" is the title of one of the earliest Canadian novels written by Wm. Kerby. The scene is laid in Quebec, and a carving of a gilded dog, inserted in the wall of a public building, visualizes the story and the legend on which it is based.

No. 9—Canada's largest University, in the matter of enrolment, is the University of Toronto. During the session of 1919-20 it has 5,200 on its roll from University College and the affiliated colleges, making it the largest University in the British Empire.

No. 10—Wheat is Canada's most important cereal crop, covering 36 per cent of land under crop, and 25 per cent of the value of all crops—263,000,000 bushels in 1920.

Note and Comment

The Norris government in Manitoba has been granted another "life." Two amendments had been offered to the reply to the speech from the throne. The second amendment was very interesting in view of the pressing nature of the financial problem in all governments. The amendment suggested that no vote should be taken on the reply until the provincial treasurer had told the House definitely how he proposed to raise revenue for running the affairs of the province.

The chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners "holds out no hope" of reduction in either freight or passenger rates.

The proceedings of the Coal Commission have been of unusual interest. Counsel for the public have prepared a list of questions to be submitted to all concerned in the production or sale of coal. The replies should be of special interest in view of the controversy re wage increases and price increases. Sitings are being held today at Nanaimo.

The Soviet government in Russia seems to be having a rough passage. Uprisings are reported from many quarters. Bolshevism is to die, according to the former Mayor of Petrograd, and "the Revolutionary Socialists will assume the reins of government." Such a change will hear a whole lot of "thinking over." There seems to have been an impression abroad that the Bolsheviks were both revolutionary and socialistic. It appears that the new "party" has stolen thunder as well as guns from Lenin and Trotsky.

The United States fleet is to concentrate in the Pacific. The action is described very clearly and also explained by those in authority. It is not "a military gesture" but merely a return to sound naval strategy.

Six persons convicted of killing British officers in Ireland were executed on Monday morning at Dublin.

The navy estimates introduced into the British House show a reduction of £11,000,000 on the estimates for the previous year.

FASHIONS

By "Babe"

Tailor-mades this spring will remain slim and straight, with skirts perhaps an inch longer than those of the past, but the muslin frock, organdie, crepe or voile will be decidedly full.

A pretty model for the summer is a shantung frock embroidered in brick red and Lima brush wool; these two colors tone beautifully together with the silk and are most effective.

Fashions are still very varied and one can choose from the hundred and one becoming styles nowadays. When selecting a gown the important thing to remember is line and color. For the slim boyish figure the straight little frock, made all in one, with round neck, bell-shaped sleeves and broad sash is flirish and smart.

Cloaks of all descriptions are becoming more and more popular. A charming model is made of black broadcloth and lined with a heavy brocade of canary yellow. This cloak is convertible, and can be worn either for day or evening wear. It has a straight fur collar of skunk, the yellow brocade making it a striking evening cloak.

The Briton sailor hats in glaze black straw and all colors, will be very popular. These are not becoming to every face as their lines are hard, but when worn with a correct tailor-made are really very smart.

Grey swede shoes and stockings have replaced black ones, and help to lighten up a dark costume.

SALT SPRING INCORPORATING?

Interesting Budget of News From Salt Spring Island; Two Inches of Snow Fell on March 11

(Review Correspondent.)

SALT SPRING ISLAND, March 11.—Mr. W. Akerman, who has been spending the winter at Fulford valley, was recently in Ganges, looking over his property on Rainbow Road.

Snow to the depth of two inches fell on Salt Spring on March 11, early in the morning.

What will happen when Salt Spring Island becomes a municipality with Mr. William Mout occupying the position of Mayor? Is it a dream?

Mr. Johnson, of Pender Island, agent for the firm of Buckerman & Co., Vancouver, canvassed the Cranberry district last Tuesday and secured several good sized orders for flour, feed, seed grain and clover and grass seed. This district has been overlooked by local feed merchants in the past. Mr. Johnson stated his intention of calling on the settlers once every month in future.

The swell car of Salt Spring is the property of Mr. James Horel, of South Salt Spring. It is a Grey-Dort, of the latest model. There are, besides this, 56 other cars and trucks on the Island.

Mr. W. Wilson and family have moved from North Salt Spring and are now occupying the late Mr. Prentice's house.

From the sages we learn that it is well to "look before we leap," yet it is quite evident, judging from the statement made in the issue of March 3, that the correspondent for Mayne Island leaps first and then looks.

Otherwise the correspondent would know that the area of Salt Spring Island is nearly 50,000 acres, and act accordingly. The correspondent, whom, for the sake of convenience, I will refer to as "Mayne Island," refers to the sarcastic remarks made by the correspondent for Salt Spring Island re the Saanichton bachelors and "Alice Blue Gown." Allow me to inform you, "Mayne Island," that although the majority of the Saanichton bachelors are known to me, I have made no reference, sarcastic or otherwise, to them, in any of my articles. And as for "Alice Blue Gown," Alice and I are strangers. I know not whether Alice wears a blue gown, a red gown, or a night gown.

LARGE NUMBER AT LECTURE

Mr. A. O. Wheeler Gave Splendid Address Last Tuesday Night; Slides Were Good.

The illustrated lecture given by Mr. A. O. Wheeler last Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Association, was attended by a large number of people. The subject of the lecture, "With the Alpine Club in the Canadian Rockies," was dealt with in a manner which showed how thoroughly conversant the speaker was with this interesting phase of Canadian life. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker at the close of his lecture, and the evening came to an end with the singing of the National Anthem. As a result of the lecture the association realized a handsome sum of money.

When You Telephone, Be Sure of Your Number

Trying to remember telephone numbers is one of life's most futile strivings. Always consult your telephone directory—do not trust to your memory for numbers. It takes only ten or twelve seconds to make sure—ten or twelve seconds spent as an insurance against delay and inconvenience. The very first requirement of effective telephone service is that the directory be consulted before calling.

Salt Spring Island

Past and Present

By "Free Lance"

The territory constituting what is Mount Baynes, the precipitous rock now the province of British Columbia, which towers about Burgeyne Bay, lies between the 49th and 57th degrees of north latitude. When we now travel to Vancouver Island, the mainland of British Columbia was known as New. There are many smaller mountains named Caledonia, and remained practically unknown, and was inhabited only by Indians and fur traders for several years. In 1858 it became a Crown colony, and in 1866 the two colonies were united by act of Imperial Parliament. Later it became a province of the Dominion of Canada.

The conditions under which British Columbia agreed to enter into the Confederation was that within two years the construction of a railway should be begun which would connect it with the eastern provinces. This railroad, now known as the Canadian Pacific railway, pierced the Rocky Mountains in the year 1885.

Since then, Victoria, situated on the southern end of Vancouver Island, has rapidly become known to travelers all over the world. Victoria is the capital city of British Columbia and is possessed of a genial and English-like climate. Immediately north of the city in the Straits of Georgia lie a group of islands known as the "Gulf Islands."

It is about one of these islands, the largest, marked on old charts as Admiral Island, but of recent years well known as Salt Spring Island, which is the subject of this article.

It is the largest of the group, that I am about to speak. Lying just north of the Saanich Peninsula, and occupying a most central position in a triangle formed by three cities—Victoria, Vancouver and Nanaimo—and sheltered from the Pacific storms by the large island of Vancouver, it is on the direct route of steamers plying between these three cities.

Salt Spring Island is about 17 miles in length from north to south, and its extreme width is about nine miles. Just about the same size as the Isle of Wight, situated on the south coast of England.

The island formerly known as Admiral Island gradually became known as Salt Spring Island on account of the saline springs, some 12 or 14 in number, which may be seen at the north end of the island. Of late years the name Salt Spring Island is published on the maps, and no longer Admiral Island. The saline springs I refer to are unsightly, and the water trickling from them is unpleasant to drink. I tasted it some years ago.

Some of these springs are on land occupied by Mr. Lang or Mr. B. Cartwright at the north end of the island. The water from these springs, although not actually poisonous, is, if compelled by thirst to drink it, become thin and unwholesome. I do not think it has ever been analyzed, and am inclined to think it contains medicinal properties of value. There is a well at Central Salt Spring which gives off an inflammable gas when the water is disturbed.

Although the island takes its name from the salt springs, there is fresh water in abundance and some twelve or thirteen lakes, well stocked with fish. The area is about 50,000 acres, of which about 20,000 are suitable for cultivation, the remainder being rocky and suitable only for sheep ranching.

The highest peak on the island is about 2,200 ft. above sea level, and is known as Mount Baynes. It is a most beautiful view from the top of the mountain. The island is a most beautiful view from the top of the mountain. The island is a most beautiful view from the top of the mountain.

WHERE IS IT?

To the Editor—

In the Monday's issue of your esteemed contemporary, the Victoria Times, the Editor states that the British naval estimates were announced by the First Lord of the Admiralty, Lord Lee of Fareham. Will you be good enough to inform us of the whereabouts of this locality. Or has the worthy Editor got confused and mixed it with Boredom, or was it Raredon he meant? Perhaps some of your readers can enlighten me.

RUMOR UNFOUNDED.

To the Editor—

At the last meeting of the Sidney Board of Trade it was reported that a rumor was being circulated that previous to the recent Provincial elections the politics of the three candidates were discussed at a meeting of the Board.

I am required to give this an unqualified denial. No politics are allowed at any meeting of the Board.

The question was raised whether the Board should appoint a committee to investigate the construction of the proposed permanent road from the Victoria Hotel to the Victoria wharf, but it was decided to leave the question with individuals at the meetings held.

MAIL SERVICE DISCUSSED

Mr. W. H. Dawes, Secretary of the Sidney Board of Trade, Speaks on the Matter

TO TRY FOR BETTER SERVICE

Members of Chamber of Commerce
Surprised at Condition of Affairs.

The members of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce received a genuine surprise last Monday afternoon when Mr. W. H. Dawes, secretary of the Sidney Board of Trade, explained the mail situation to them.

Mr. Dawes drew attention to the fact that for over two years the Sidney Board of Trade has agitated for better mail service with Victoria but up to the present time the service has not been improved.

It was further explained by Mr. Dawes that after the V. & S. Ry. dropped the mail contract it had been handed over to the B. C. Electric Ry. Co., despite the Sidney Board of Trade request that a motor service should be inaugurated twice daily to and from Victoria.

The Aerial League of Canada, also had offered to handle the service in the way of an experiment, but both suggestions were turned down.

Constant application to Federal members, and to the postal inspector at Victoria, said Mr. Dawes, resulted in a promise of a supplementary motor service, but this was not good enough. The motor service concerns now plying between Sidney and Victoria had offered to carry the mails between the two places for less than it now costs to carry it from B. C. E. stations in both places to the post office buildings.

One point which was drawn to the attention of the members of the Chamber of Commerce was that if by chance a resident of Sidney posted a letter too late for the Saturday night mail, it would mean a loss of seventy hours, as the next mail did not leave until Monday night. Some of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce were indignant that such a condition of affairs should exist.

"A man could walk the distance and deliver a letter in quicker time."

"Any system that requires seventy hours to deliver a letter eighteen miles away rectifying." You could not get it any worse," were some of the remarks made concerning the present service.

It was recognized that the matter of rapid mail service between Victoria and Sidney was of vital importance to both places, and the Chamber of Commerce promised to do all in its power to better conditions.

A committee was appointed to take the matter up with Mr. Fletcher, and "unless his arguments are more convincing than they seem," to request action at Ottawa.

A number of speakers spoke of the feeling of cooperation that existed between the two places, and Ald A. E. Todd suggested that further to cement the good feeling that existed it would be advisable for the directors to hold one of their luncheons at Sidney, travelling out by way of the B. C. Electric railway and returning by motor stage, in order to get an idea of the situation.

(Review Correspondent.)

SAANICHTON, March 15.—In a Saanich League game played at the Agricultural Hall, Saanichton, on Thursday evening last, the Saanich basketball team proved too much for the Cedar Hill five. The final score was 31-12.

CLOSED FOR SHORT TIME.

The Sidney Mill, which has been in operation for the past couple of weeks, following a close-down for a month or six weeks, again shut down this week in order to give workmen an opportunity to finish the necessary repair work. The planer is still running, however, to catch up on the work, and also the re-saw.

Quite a number of men are now employed at the mill, and it is expected that operations will be resumed on a much larger scale within a couple of weeks, as it is reported that the company has several large orders to fill.

"The Goblin's Cave"

By A. B. P.

One-day Betty was feeling rather cross. "What can I do?" she said, as she sat in the garden.

"Come with me," said a voice.

Betty started and looked around.

Where could it be? She jumped up and hunted among the bushes about her.

Just then she heard a leaf rustle, and a small voice said:

"Here I am."

She looked up and saw a tiny Goblin dressed in yellow and scarlet sitting on a bough.

She gasped. Surely she was dreaming, but no! The little man beckoned to her.

"Follow me," he said.

Betty was quite sure she was dreaming and would wake up in a moment to find him gone.

He hopped down from his perch and led the way across the garden.

When he got to the hedge it opened before him and shut when they had passed through. Then he turned to Betty, who was gazing at him in wonder.

"I must tie a handkerchief over your eyes for a very little time,"

This he did. "Now turn round once."

Betty obeyed and felt herself sinking into the ground. Down, down, down, she went. At last she stopped with a bump.

The Goblin took the handkerchief off and when she opened her eyes she saw an amazing sight.

Before her was the opening of a cave and she could just see that it was brilliantly lighted.

"My name is Sandy, as I live under the sands," said the Goblin as he led Betty in. She stooped so that she wouldn't bump her head, but she found she had grown as small as Sandy!

"How lovely!" she murmured.

When they got into the cave, Betty saw it was occupied by a funny little old woman, who was still shorter than Sandy, and an old dog.

"This is my wife; Granny we call her. Here is Bruno, my dog, who looks after her while I'm away, as I was today."

Betty shook hands with Granny and patted Bruno.

"Now, Granny, we'd like some tea as we've had a long journey."

"Yes, yes, of course," she said, and hustled off to the kitchen.

"Now let me show you our house," said Sandy.

"Oh, I should love to see it," said Betty, for she thought they lived in one room.

Sandy went through the door and up a narrow stairway. When he got to the top he led Betty along a very dark passage that twisted here, there and everywhere.

"We have it like this because our enemies try to find our home to destroy it, and they always get lost in these passages," said Sandy.

"What a good idea," said Betty, holding on tight to Sandy as he wound in and out. At last they reached a door. Sandy turned a key and they entered a large sunny room overlooking the sea. There were tables and chairs and beautiful rugs, and best of all, tiny little pictures a fairy artist had drawn of Sandy, Granny and Bruno.

"Why, how lovely; but I thought you lived miles under the sand," cried Betty.

"Well, our little cave is, but the passages are uphill, and this is on the side of a cliff," answered Sandy.

"Now, come along and we will examine the other rooms. This is the ballroom we let the fairies have their dances in."

It was a lovely room, with long mirrors all around; the whole of the front was glass with a little balcony outside overlooking the sea. "Next week we will invite you to a dance," said Sandy.

"I should love it," said Betty.

They wandered on through many rooms. There was a huge circular room where they had midnight feasts, a museum, and many others. I will just tell you about the one Betty was to sleep in next week.

It was quite small with a little bed with a blue eiderdown and a frilly white pillow; there was a mirror and dressing table, which was white with a blue cloth. On the walls there were pictures of fairies dancing and feasting. The floor was covered with a fluffy blue mat. The French window looked out onto the sea.

"I can hardly wait till next week," said Betty. She was feeling quite excited already.

"We must be going to tea now," said Sandy. "Granny will be wondering what has happened to us."

They soon got back to the cave and found tea ready on the table.

"How good it looks, Granny," said Betty.

"Bruno, sit up, sir!" commanded Sandy, and up hopped Bruno into a chair.

"Why, what a clever dog!" exclaimed Betty.

"Yes, he's very knowing," said Granny.

Tea was soon finished, and it was time for Betty to be going.

"Good-bye, and thank you. I've had a lovely time, and I want to come next week ever so much."

Instead of going down, Betty went up this time.

"Good-bye, Sandy," she said at the top, and in another instant he had disappeared.

Betty rushed off to find her nurse, and tell her all her adventures.

Betty's nurse was called Mary, and she was the kind of nurse that believed in fairies, so she was very interested in Betty's tale of "The Goblin's Cave."

A SPIDER'S APPETITE.

A spider is a hungry creature, and if you take the trouble to watch him carefully you will be surprised at the amount of food he can eat in a day.

A naturalist once thought he would test the appetite of a certain spider. He put a fly into its web at 5.30 in the morning, but the spider did not come out from its hiding place immediately.

The naturalist looking carefully under the leaves, found that it was already busy eating an earwig. It came out for a moment to roll the fly up in its web so that it could not escape, and then went back to eat the rest of the earwig.

This was finished at 7 o'clock. Then the spider rested, but by 9 o'clock it had eaten the fly. Soon after this a daddy long-legs was put into the web, and by noon the spider had finished him, too.

At 1 o'clock a blue bottle fly was greedily devoured. During the day over a hundred small midges became caught in the web, and all were fast prisoners and quite dead.

When the spider was visited after dark and examined by lantern-light, it was found to be eagerly rolling up bundles of green midges and eating them greedily.

Later on the spider set to work to repair the web, and when morning broke, it was all ready to catch the next day's food.

A MERRY BIRD.

In China there is a pretty little bird called the fork-tailed tit-mouse.

It has a red beak, orange-colored throat, green back, yellow legs, black tail, and red and yellow wings, so he is very gay and bright. He has a funny trick of turning somersaults!

He throws back his head and falls off his perch, head over heels, landing on the ground or branch on his feet. He will do it many times over, just as if he enjoyed it.

RIDDLE.

Why did the cedar bark?

Because it saw the bull rush.

There was a proud school boy of Ware,

Who walked with his nose in the air.

He slipped on some butter, And fell in the gutter.

Which injured his curly brown hair. There was a gay scholar at Lunn.

Whose face was as bright as the sun. He laughed all day long.

Or whistled a song.

And his eyes simply sparkled with fun.

BARNACLES.

You all know what they are, and if you have scratched your foot against the rocks when bathing in summer time, you also know that they can give you a poisonous wound.

There is something about barnacles which somehow manages to stain little peoples' white dresses too. Altogether they are rather troublesome things.

Barnacles have a way of making their home where they are not wanted, on the bottom of ships, or even on the bodies of whales.

The latter try to get rid of them by swimming over rocks, scraping barnacles against the rough sides of a keel, or by using a ship's anchor to scrape them off.

On going ship can be so painted below the water line all these things of blotsome barnacles have to be scraped off.

Near Seattle there are two lakes which are connected with the sea by means of a canal. The salt water cannot mix with the fresh water of the lakes because of carefully arranged locks.

Ships are taken into this lake water and kept there a short time, till the barnacles, which do not like fresh water, loosen and come off without any trouble.

The teacher was explaining to her class some of the reasons for education for a farmer. She asked:

"What would you do if you wanted to order a separator from a mail order catalogue and could not read or write?"

A boy of nine answered promptly:

"Get my wife to do it!"

A loan of $4,000,000 to carry the P. G. E. to Prince Rupert has received the approval of the B. C. Legislature.

Members were all agreed that the railroad was an ill-conceived and ill-fated enterprise. The "white elephant" is not to be deserted, or even sold, but "carried on."

One member seems to have suddenly discovered that Prince Rupert is the logical outlet for the Peace River district.

The 1920 operations of the C. P. R. are outlined in a report just published. The total amount available for dividends was close to $22,000,000.

When the Mohawk chief, Hendrick, joined Sir William Johnson's campaign against the French at Lake George, Brant, at thirteen, with two older brothers, followed him.

Johnson, who had married a sister of Brant, took some interest in him and sent him to an Indian school at Lebanon, Connecticut. The sequence of this training was his acting as interpreter to a missionary in 1772.

He was also employed by Sir William Johnson as an agent among various tribes. After the death of Sir William, Brant became the secretary of his son-in-law.

When the revolution broke out, the Mohawks under the influence of Brant, became firmly attached to the British cause.

After this, Brant went to Canada and then to England. He was very popular there and made his acquaintance with the nobility. He had his picture painted by Romney for the Earl of Warwick.

He returned to Canada in 1776, and received a commission as colonel in the British army, owing to the brilliant part he took in the war on the northern frontier of the colonies, but he was generally known as Capt. Brant.

Many raids were made by him with the Johnsons and Butlers, on border settlements at New York, but he was not present at the massacre of Wyoming as generally understood.

The Mohawks were encamped on the American side of the Niagara river, but their hearts were with the British, and Brant went to the Governor General to ask for a piece of land on the north side of Lake Erie, which was granted.

Here all his learning came into use for his own people. He devoted himself to them, and worked diligently for their peace and improvement, especially striving to stop the introduction of fiery spirits among them.

He again visited England in 1785, and was entertained with great distinction by the nobility, and the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. While he was there he published the Gospel of St. Mark and the Book of Common Prayer in Mohawk and English languages. In 1787, He also raised funds to build a church.

On returning to Canada he visited what is now the United States, of America, and spoke with the statesmen and veterans of the revolution, but his life was often in danger from many that hated him, and those who suffered by his raid.

The right of the territory north-west of Ohio he supported and was present with 150 Mohawks at the defeat of General Arthur St. Clair.

The efforts to force the Mohawks from their lands, and the plots made to destroy his power, troubled him much in his later years. He died on Nov. 24, 1807, on his estate at the head of Lake Ontario.

The county of Brant, and the city of Brantford commemorate the name of Joseph Brant.

He again visited England in 1785, and was entertained with great distinction by the nobility, and the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. While he was there he published the Gospel of St. Mark and the Book of Common Prayer in Mohawk and English languages. In 1787, He also raised funds to build a church.

On returning to Canada he visited what is now the United States, of America, and spoke with the statesmen and veterans of the revolution, but his life was often in danger from many that hated him, and those who suffered by his raid.

The right of the territory north-west of Ohio he supported and was present with 150 Mohawks at the defeat of General Arthur St. Clair.

The efforts to force the Mohawks from their lands, and the plots made to destroy his power, troubled him much in his later years. He died on Nov. 24, 1807, on his estate at the head of Lake Ontario.

The county of Brant, and the city of Brantford commemorate the name of Joseph Brant.

I.O.D.E. SECOND PRIZE ESSAY

THE LIFE OF JOSEPH BRANT.

(By Nellie Livesey, North Saanich School. Aged 15.)

There once lived in Ohio, a famous Chief of the Mohawks, Joseph Brant, born about 1742. He was called by his Indian friends "Thayendanegea."

One of the five Indian chiefs that Addison mentions in the "Spectator" and who visited England in 1711, is supposed to be his grandfather.

When the Mohawk chief, Hendrick, joined Sir William Johnson's campaign against the French at Lake George, Brant, at thirteen, with two older brothers, followed him.

Johnson, who had married a sister of Brant, took some interest in him and sent him to an Indian school at Lebanon, Connecticut. The sequence of this training was his acting as interpreter to a missionary in 1772.

He was also employed by Sir William Johnson as an agent among various tribes. After the death of Sir William, Brant became the secretary of his son-in-law.

When the revolution broke out, the Mohawks under the influence of Brant, became firmly attached to the British cause.

After this, Brant went to Canada and then to England. He was very popular there and made his acquaintance with the nobility. He had his picture painted by Romney for the Earl of Warwick.

The aforesaid prominent resident claimed he would rather be dead than have his name in the Sidney and Islands Review. Our reporter informed him his name would be in the Review with a two column account of his funeral then, so he had better come through with the news.

(No. 1)

"While Sidney Sleeps."

While Sidney sleeps,
With all her street lights gleaming,
Millions of her millmen
Now lie sweetly dreaming,
"These who have bum shoes
Turn on their backs and moan,
"Oh, I wish to God I'd bought a pair
Of 'Leckie Shoes' from Sloan

A Fool All His Life

SLOAN

THE SHOEMAKER

Frankly admits he may have been, but even so, listen to what the immortal

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

SAYS:

"This fellow is 'Woe' enough to play the fool,
And to do that well craves a 'kind' of wit.
He must observe the time on whom he jests.

The quality of persons, and the time,
And like the haggard, check, at every feather.

That comes before his eye."
Being no chicken, Sloan knows nothing about feathers, but he sure knows how to make, repair or sell good
